Whichever way you look at it, the Māori Sports Awards represent the irresistible momentum of Māori involvement in sport, representing a people on the move!

As always, we have our fair share of individual champions, world-beaters in their chosen field, fulfilling a tradition of uncompromising excellence. We have many, many Māori members of champion teams, upholding the promise of partnership in leading and building our national honour and pride.

We have teams representing Māori in international competitions, whose successes are celebrated by all New Zealanders – and we have national teams composed entirely of Māori, who have a special place in our hearts. Increasingly, we have sporting competitions established on a kaupapa Māori, with a focus on participation and whānau achievement, health and nutrition, and good role models laying the groundwork for future generations of champions!

We also have Māori coaches and mentors who infuse their work with a wairua Māori, an understanding of mana demonstrated in respect, discipline and teamwork, and an ability to draw strength from those who have gone before. We saw most of these elements in our national Olympic team – individual gold medals for Lisa Carrington in kayaking and Cameron Leslie in Paralympic swimming, a team bronze for Storm Uru in rowing, a squad that included 22 Māori athletes and three Paralympians, and the evergreen Amster Reedy providing the whole team with sage advice, strength and confidence drawn from tikanga Māori.

Also in the world arena, we have 10 Māori individual world champions and 17 more Māori in world champion teams – including two waka ama crews composed entirely of Māori. We have to acknowledge the Māori contribution to the all-conquering Mamaku, the New Zealand Women's rugby team. And we have Māori coaching our national netball and cricket teams, and top rugby teams.

I want to acknowledge the NZRU for restoring the title Māori All Blacks to our Māori side, so they can share in the glory of the name that so many Māori players have helped to earn for the All Blacks. I also want to salute the growth of kaupapa Māori sports like waka ama and Maori multi-sports. The third IronMaori competition last year saw all 1550 entries snapped up in 11 minutes, and the inaugural TriMaori this year attracted 750 competitors. People of all ages, shapes, sizes and walks of life sweat it out for themselves, their whānau and, ultimately, for the good of Māori people as a whole.

This is the ultimate achievement of Māori participation in sport, and why it is so important to celebrate nga Tohu Takaro Māori, the Māori Sports Awards.

Kia ora,

Dr Pita Sharples,
Minister of Maori Affairs

REALISING MĀORI POTENTIAL

Leith Comer

Chief Executive - Te Puni Kōkiri

This has been a fantastic year for Māori sports.

Our elite athletes shone at the Olympics in London. Canoeist Lisa Carrington and Paralympic swimmer Cameron Leslie brought home Gold and rower Storm Uru; the Bronze. All are finalists for the Supreme title of Māori Sports Person of the Year.

Māori athletes have been outstanding in many other sports too; waka ama, hockey, wool-handling, boxing, surfing, rugby league, netball and rugby. For every individual or team that is performing well on-the-field, there is a coach off-the-field guiding, prompting and shaping them, like Waimarama Taumaunu. The Silver Ferns have recently been dealing to the Australians under her guidance.

For 22 years Te Tohu Tākaro o Aotearoa has been promoting and celebrating excellence in Māori sports and I want to mihi to them for their dedication and commitment to this kaupapa.

There is no doubt that the Māori presence in New Zealand sports has been strong and positive; across all codes and at every level. These Awards celebrate Māori participation, contribution and achievement from our Junior and Senior sports people.

Tonight, our focus and attention is on our elite sports men and women; their coaches and administrators and by extension their whānau and friends who join the throngs of supporters cheering them on to even further success.

On behalf of Te Puni Kōkiri, I acknowledge everyone nominated for an Award tonight and congratulate all of the winners. Your successes continue to inspire our up-and-coming generations of Māori sportspeople.

MIGHTY RIVER POWER

We never stop.

Mighty River Power is one of New Zealand's largest electricity companies – our core business is based on reliable, low fuel-cost electricity generation complemented by sales to businesses and homes, which account for about 18.5% of New Zealand's total electricity consumption.

We operate nine hydro power stations, four geothermal plants and a multi-unit gas-fired station. More than 90% of our electricity production is from renewable sources. Mighty River Power sells electricity through multiple channels and retail brands, including Mercury Energy, GLO-BUG, Bosco Connect and Tiny Mighty Power.

The deep and enduring relationships we have built with our commercial partners, many iwi and other stakeholders reflects the human values that we regard as integral to our business. Our joint development approach with Maori land trusts, for example, has been the platform for significant geothermal growth over the past decade and is founded on the principles of highly valued, long-term partnerships that continue to deliver significant mutual benefits.
