E ngā iwi o te motu, tēnā koutou, tēnā koutou, tēnā koutou katoa.

Tuatahi me mihi, me tangi atu ki ngā toa hākinakina kua mate atu i tēnei tau.

Ko Papali'itele Pita Fatialofa tērā, kei roto i ō tātou poho e noho wera tonu ana, he toa tūturu, he rangatira o tōna iwi. Ko Dennis Hansen tērā, ko Laly Haddon hoki, he toa whutupaoro rāua i ō rāua wā – tae atu ki a Alby Pryor, nānā tenei kaupapa i whakatū - me te maha noa atu o ngā rangatira o te papa tākaro: haere, haere koutou, haere atu rā.

I tēnei pō, kua huihui tātou ki te whakanui i te hunga kua eke ki ngā taumata, me ō rātou whānau hoki. Ko ngā toa hei tauira, hei arataki i a tātou, a, nā ngā whānau rātou i tautoko kia piki ai ki runga ki te rangi.

The Maori Sports Awards have always been a highlight of the year. It is a time when we come together and celebrate our sporting triumphs, but it is also a time when we can look back over the year and measure the success of our communities and people, and particularly our rangatahi.

The finalists in this year's awards span the generations. Some have been world leaders in their sports for many years, and some are only just beginning their sports journey, but represent stellar success and commitment.

I want to particularly acknowledge those who have contributed to a growing number of Maori participating in physical activity, both here in Aotearoa and overseas. It is extremely inspiring to see Maori, big or small, young and old participating in a wide range of sports, which in the past seemed to be only accessible by the young and fit.

Alongside this growth in participation, and changing attitudes towards sport, I believe that a new generation of successful sports leadership has also inspired people into a wider range of sports activities. I want to make particular mention of the huge phenomena that are Waka Ama, multi-sports, and Crossfit which have taken our communities by storm.

The stories I have heard, and the people that I have seen participating in these sports give me great faith that as a Maori we can do absolutely anything we put our minds to. That's true inspiration.

Tonight is about recognising the successful pursuits of Maori in sport. Each and every finalist across all categories has represented our nation proudly, and has shown commitment, perseverance, and determination. Each of these finalists has also been a part of lifting the profile of their sport, and as Maori, shining the light of pride on our whanau, hapu and iwi.

I want to acknowledge the leadership shown by all finalists, and indeed all of those champions in our communities who promote engagement in sports. I also want to recognise their whanau, friends and supporters. It is no mean feat to become an elite sports person, but tonight is about celebrating you, your vision, passion and commitment, and how that has impacted on us all.

Tēnā koutou katoa

REALISING MĀORI POTENTIAL

Michelle Hippolite

Chief Executive - Te Puni Kōkiri

E ngā iwi, e ngā hapū, e ngā whānau katoa o te motu, tēnā koutou katoa.

In my role as Chief Executive of Te Puni Kōkiri I am often asked "What does success for Māori look like?" In many ways the Māori Sports Awards is one initiative that contributes to celebrating success.

The Māori Sports Awards turn the spotlight on our sports men and women who are pursuing their dreams and realising success, as well as celebrating the commitment and resolve of the coaches, referees and administrators who work to strengthen sports in Aotearoa New Zealand.

The Māori Sports Awards recognise the hard worn path from participation to winning - the value of participation cannot be undervalued. From tamariki who turn up at Saturday sports on netball courts and rugby fields in driving rain, to whānau who volunteer as coaches, who take their kids (and other people's kids!) to practices, who fundraise or play governance roles: sporting success is built on collective participation and commitment.

To the individual achievements of this year's Māori Sports Awards recipients I applaud your passion, tenacity and pursuit of excellence. Your success lifts us all up. I also commend Te Tohu Tākaro o Aotearoa for creating a platform for Māori sports and for fostering young Māori talent through sports and educational scholarships.

The Māori Sports Awards remain an important waka to help demonstrate success a canoe which we are all in - with no exception. He waka eke noa.

On behalf of Te Tohu o Aotearoa Charitable Trust, it is indeed my pleasure and privilege to welcome you here tonight for the 23rd annual National Māori Sports Awards.

This year, we will celebrate the achievements of our outstanding Māori sports people – their dedication, determination, motivation and perseverance in reaching the highest levels in their chosen fields.

To the many individuals, organisations, community and sporting leaders and people who have provided sponsorship, expert advice, guidance and voluntary support – our many, many thanks.

To my fellow Board members and to our Chief Executive along with his team for their on-going efforts in making this ceremony one of New Zealand's premier events – ngā mihi tino nui ki a koutou katoa.

Kāti, ka nui tāku hari me tāku koa ki te kaupapa o te pō, tēnā koutou katoa.

singer, songwriter

Whakatāne talent Maisey Rika continues to woo the world – and win acclaim – for her honey-stung vocals and fusion of Māori and English lyrics.

This year, Maisey won the coveted APRA Maioha award for her song, Rūaimoko, as well as scooping four of the nine titles in the Open Section at the 2013 National Waiata Māori Music Awards.

Her third release and second full-length studio album, Whitiora, debuted at number one on the Kiwi album charts and number five on our international album charts – the highest charting original Māori language album to date in New Zealand history.

Tama Waipara's highly anticipated fourth album, Fill Up The Silence, debuted at number six on the New Zealand music album charts in September this year.

The Ōpōtiki old boy graduated from the prestigious Manhattan School of Music with a Master's in music and performance clarinet, has studied conducting and worked in theatre – notably the hit show, Brel, alongside Jon Toogood, Julia Deans and Jennifer Ward-Lealand.

Recorded at Bunker Studio in Brooklyn, New York, Fill Up The Silence fuses traditional, grunty Pacific-infused afro beats with raw vocals and poi rhythms.

Jack Taiaroa

Teōne Wiwi 'Jack' Taiaroa

Ngāi Tahu

rugby, cricket, athletics

Teōne Wiwi Taiaroa (1862 – 1907) – also known as John or Jack Taiaroa – is among the first of the many standout Māori players who have been a staple in All Black sides for more than a century.

Jack grew up in Ōtākou and had a distinguished Kai Tahu whakapapa.

His grandfather was the chief, Te Matenga Taiaroa, and his father was Hori Kerei Taiaroa, a long-serving parliamentarian for Southern Māori and a tireless campaigner for Kai Tahu land claims.

He trained as a lawyer and practised in Hawke's Bay for some years before returning to Ōtākou.

Jack learnt the art of rugby at Otago Boys High School and represented Otago between 1881 and 1884.

 TAIAROA. CARTER. DUMBELL. I.
 DAVY. W. MILLTON, Captain.
 LECKY. WARBRICK. I.

He was selected for a nine-match Australian tour in 1884 – the first rugby team to represent New Zealand overseas.

Scoring nine tries in the tour's nine games is an amazing feat given the rarity of tries at the time, and that three of the matches were against New South Wales. His try tally was twice as many as any of his team mates.

All all-round athlete, Jack represented Hawke's Bay in rugby in 1887 and 1889 and in cricket in the 1890s.

In 1893, he was runner-up in the national athletics championships in the long jump for which he held a national record.

'... what endeared him more than anything to the hearts and memories of Pākehā and Māori alike was his prowess as an all-round athlete. "Jack" Taiaroa, it will be remembered, was in his day not only one of the best footballers in Otago, but in New Zealand. In those days it was the chief ambition of the rising generation to be able to play football like Jack Taiaroa.'

'To everyone who supported my journey, your enthusiastic interest, generous koha and warm aroha touched me deeply. Sincere and grateful thanks.'

Tennis great Ruia Morrison returned to Wimbledon in June this year – 53 years after she last played at the world-famous tennis tournament.

A group of 14 passionate members of the Aotearoa Māori Tennis Association accompanied Ruia who was the first Māori to play at the prestigious club.

On hearing about the visit, the All England Club accredited her with the benefits of their prestigious 'Last 8 Club'.

Players who have made it into the quarter-finals of the singles, semi-finals of the doubles or finals of the mixed doubles are invited into the club.

Members are given a pass to access the grounds every day of the tournament, a guest pass, use of a private hospitality suite and daily match tickets for the main courts. Tennis NZ will recognise Ruia's achievements with life membership at their upcoming awards ceremony in December.
